Sportlight
There is sport where the stadium knows the roar
Of the long end run or the winning score.
But still the wanderers seek the gate
Where the rivers run and the great hills wait.

2.(12)

Which sport do you prefer?
Where the multitudes pack
the stadium or where the hunt leads into the lonely hills?

3.(13)

Far away from the crowds, the trail after Rocky Mountain sheep is worth taking

THE CALL OF THE GAME.

- 4.(40) Henry Reviere, famous guide, leads the way.
- 5.(8) 5,000 miles away 70,000 world series fans were packing the Yankee Stadium,
- 6.(6) "The million dollar gate" of baseball is no longer a myth.
- 7.(12) 22 miles of seats, and each seat taken surrounded Babe Ruth in his rush against the Giants.
- 8.(6) No crowds and clamor, Silence, solitude -- but sport.
- 9.(8) In place of umpires and referees, the huskie carries the main burden.
- 10.(12) At the same hour the multitudes at the track find their thrill in the head and head finish.
- 11.(11) Nose and nose - stride for stride - and at Belmont Park 50,000 hearts stop beating.
- 12.(9) Back to the wilderness of rock and range where the mountain stadium waits.
- 13.(10) When the meat for men and dogs gives out a lonely lake comes to the rescue.
- 14.(5) Here, also, is sport that needs no cheer leaders.
- 15.(6) There are times when a fighting trout is better than a two-base hit.
- 16.(10) The Rocky Mountain sheep is harder to catch than one of Babe Ruth's home-runs.
- 17.(6) Wild sheep are harder to reach than a 500 yard golf-hole.
- 18.(6) Better than a touchdown or a silver cup-a big ram at last.

THE CALL OF THE GAME.

- 19.(9) In the rush of those who go with the crowds,
foot-ball breaks all records.
- 20.(7) The dashing West Point cadets are no small part off the show.
- 21.(11) It takes 24 miles of seats to handle the 78,000 who pack the Yale Bowl for an Army game.
- 22.(7) But the roar of stand and stadium dies out above the timberlines.
- 23.(6) Here only mountains and sky look down upon the field of contest.
- 24.(16) The crowds grow greater and greater. But there are still bold adventurers who seek their thrills in the far off places hidden away on the last frontiers.
